Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 101

1. 35 U.S.C. 101 reads as follows:

Whoever invents or discovers any new and useful process, machine, manufacture, or composition of matter, or any new and useful improvement thereof, may obtain a patent therefor, subject to the conditions and requirements of this title.

2. Claims 50-52, 64-66, 70-72, 81-83, are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 101 because the claim is directed to a recording medium storing nonfunctional descriptive material.

Data structures not claimed as embodied in computer-readable media are descriptive material per se and are not statutory because they are neither physical “things” nor statutory processes. See, e.g. Warmerdam, 33 F.3d at 1361, 31 USPQ2d at 1760 (claim to a data structure per se held nonstatutory) and merely claiming nonfunctional descriptive material stored in a computer-readable medium does not make it statutory. See MPEP 2106.IV.B.1.

3. Claims 53-63, 67-69, 73-80, 84-86, contain allowable subject matter over the prior art of record.

4. The following is a statement of reasons for the indication of allowable subject matter:

The claimed invention is directed to a video information management method. The independent claims identify the feature of “the video index information having a tree structure comprising: first segment information configured to manage a predetermined segment of the video information; a plurality of second segment information, each configured to manage at least a portion of the predetermined segment of the video information; first package information configured to manage the first segment information; and second package information configured to collectively manage the plurality of second segment information as a group, wherein the first segment information is further configured to manage the second package information". The closest prior art, Golberg et al (P.N. 5,963,203) is directed to a conventional video apparatus including indexing the video content, either singularly or in combination fails to anticipate or render the above underlined limitations obvious.

Conclusion

5. The prior art made of record and not relied upon is considered pertinent to applicant's disclosure.

Tanaka discloses a selective information playback from recording medium based on user input content codes.
